DETAILED ACTION

1. This Office Action is a response to the amendment filed July 24, 2006. Applicant has canceled claims 7-15. Claims 1-6 and 16-30 are pending in the application.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
  - a. A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.
3. Claims 1-2, 16-18, and 26-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the admitted prior art (APA) [figure 3] in view of Dwarkadas, U.S. Patent No. 6,684,298 [hereafter, Dwarkadas].
  - a. As per claim 1:
    - i. The APA teaches a computer system comprising a processor having a trace cache.
    - ii. The APA, however, does not teach that the cache is dynamically reconfigurable to provide specific configuration of the cache.
    - iii. Reconfiguring a cache to suit a particular application and/or to further improve the cache performance and/or energy consumption has been known and widely practiced in the pertinent art. Dwarkadas is one of the many references teaches such dynamically cache reconfiguration [col. 2, lines 44-51].
    - iv. One having ordinary skill in the art, who is familiar with the dynamically reconfigured cache, looks at the teaching of the APA would lead he or she to further incorporate the feature of dynamically reconfiguring a cache into that of the APA so as to further improve the system performance and/or system energy consumption, or to suit a particular application.

- v. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the pertinent art to employ logic into the APA cache controller for dynamically reconfiguring the trace cache to provide application specific configuration of the trace cache. The ability to further improve system performance and/or system energy consumption provides sufficient suggestion and motivation to one having ordinary skill in pertinent art to do such further logic employment in the APA system.
- b. As per claim 2: the further claimed limitation of "wherein the trace cache comprises: a tag array; a data array; and a next fetch address (NFA) array" is also taught by the APA [see a gain figure 3].
- c. Claims 16-18 and 26-27: the claimed system basically encompasses the same scope as that in claims 1-2. The further claimed limitation of "instruction cache", "execution core" and/or "main memory" are no more than necessary elements in a computer system. Accordingly, claims 16-18 and 26-27 are also rejected for the same basis as set forth for claims 1-2.

Allowable Subject Matter

- 4. Claims 22-25 are allowed over the prior art of record.
- 5. Claims 3, 19, and 28 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims. Consequently, claims 4-6, 20-21, and 29-30 would also be allowed over the prior art of record.

Conclusion

- 6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
  - a. John, 5,867,422, teaches a dynamically reconfigurable cache.
  - b. Brown, 5,727,208, teaches reconfiguration of a cache for best utilization of a processing operation.

Art Unit: 2187

- c. Calder et al., 2004/0111708, teaches reconfiguration of cache and other structures with the intention of saving energy.
  - d. Cao, 6,782,550, teaches a cache that can be dynamically reconfigured.
  - e. Maiyuran et al., 6,665,775, teaches a dynamically reconfigured cache for simultaneous accesses by multiple computing engines.
